

First Nations Practitioner Development Fund

This Fund supports Western Australian First Nations screen practitioners by contributing funding towards professional career and development opportunities.

What You Can Receive Funding For

Professional Skills Development Opportunities

- Short courses and master classes that strategically build on the practitioner's previous experience.
- Preference is given to development opportunities in positions identified as lacking in the WA First Nations screen sector, where training in these fields is not accessible in the practitioner's current place of residence.
- If Screenwest invites a practitioner to a skills development opportunity, Screenwest may cover the practitioner's basic costs directly e.g. accommodation and flights. If this is this case an application may not be required.

Travel to National Festivals and Awards

- For practitioners with projects selected to premier at a festival and/or whose project has been nominated for an award.
- For practitioners to progress their career through exposure and networking.
- For international travel, practitioners whose projects have received Screen Australia funding will need to approach Screen Australia for international travel support.

Travel to National Strategic Meetings

- For practitioners to meet with national broadcasters and Screen Australia. The practitioner needs to prove there is strong market interest in their project and that the company has a slate of projects ready for the market.

- A practitioner is likely to receive this type of travel funding once per year unless an exceptional opportunity presents and a strong rationale accompanies the application.

Other Funding

- For industry market events and conferences, refer to the Screenwest Travel Support funding guidelines and apply as outlined in the advertised travel funding round.
- For placement funding, refer to the Screenwest Professional Development – Placements Fund.
- Speak to the Screenwest First Nations Executive for more information.
